

I can recognise what is right and what is wrong.

I can see things from another point of view.

What do we mean when we say the
'right and wrong'?

Who was right in the story of Jack and the Beanstalk?

Jack

Giant

Why do you think that?

He gave away their cow, which was their only means of having money for food.

He stole things from the Giant.

He was only trying to help his Mummy because they had no food.

He scared Jack and threatened to hurt him.

He chased after Jack to get his things back.

Who was right in the story of Jack and the Beanstalk?

Have you changed your mind at all?

Is it fair to only listen to one person's opinion/viewpoint on what happens?

Everyone has a different point of view and everyone has the right to have their viewpoints heard.

How could these scenarios be resolved?

A girl took a rubber from a boy on her table that was about to use it.

A boy is holding onto 3 coloured pencils he is about to use. A girl needs the blue. He doesn't want to share.

A girl gave her skipping rope to her friend to hold whilst she went to the toilet. A boy wants to use it so she let's him.

In partners, choose a scenario and act it out.

Show how it is going to be resolved. Remember to show how each character is feeling by changing your expression.
